"Marxismo a lo Andino"

Christine Hunefeldt
OHs: Tu 12:30h-14:30h @ H&SS 6072

Is there anything special about how Andean politicians, political philosophers, and historians have interpreted, adapted, misrepresented Marx's thoughts on the present and future of capitalist relationships?

We want to build up an informed assessment of how an "Andean Marxism" came about, which readings of the Andean past preceded Andean Marxist political analysis, propositions, and conclusions?

Basic reading for everyone: J. C. Mariategui, Siete Ensayos de Interpretation de la Realidad Peruana.

I would like to divide our approach to this question into several aspects of it:

1. What was the interplay between socialist thinking and indigenismo in the 1920s and 1930s? i.e. the 'conversations' between Jose Carlos Mariategui, Raul Haya de la Torre, Clorinda Matto de Turner, Icaza, Juan Maiguashca, Manuel Gonzales Prada

Siete Ensayos, APRA y el Anti-Imperialismo, Aves Sin Nido (respectively) + Huasipungo (Ecuador)
